Course Description

This is a studio-based design course that introduces the principles and practices of communicating through images and illustration. We will engage in visual research, discussion, critique, creative exercises, and presentation. This course is composed of a set of individual small projects and one self-defined project. An extensive menu of project prompts from which you can choose is available on the Canvas course site. Each has a basic and advanced version. Some are simple and others more complex, they offer a variety of media formats and topics to explore.

Topics and Objectives

The exercises, discussions, and activities during this class will provide opportunities to engage with topics such as: digital and traditional illustration and photography, applications to print and motion and interactive media, visual narrative, and more.

Readings and Canvas Submissions

This course has no required books. At UF we have free access to the tutorial site, Lynda.com, which can be used in the course. We will use the UF e-Learning site, Canvas, to access course materials and submit all assignments.

Required Materials

Various Adobe software will be our technical focus but you may also explore many other traditional mediums. You may need to buy additional art materials to complete some projects.

Grading & Creative Feedback

This course has a group of speedy exercises, one is self-defined. Clearly understanding how projects will be graded is important. The process is very performance-based as opposed to subjective. Associated with each assignment is a checklist/rubric of required items. Full points are awarded if the specific work is sufficiently complete and uploaded on time. This functions similar to a pass/fail mode.

Below is the weighting of each of assignments...

Set of Projects, averaged 80%
One Self-Defined Project, 20%

Critical feedback is provided verbally during small group discussions (with the instructor as well as your peers) and during final project presentations. This feedback is information on how to improve your work in concept, form, and craft – particularly with the intent of assembling a professional portfolio of design work. The mid-project reviews are the most important days to gather feedback from peers and also my view of your project progress and work quality. This qualitative feedback does not impact the project points, it is intended to improve your direction as you move through the work.

This course follows a standard UF campus grade point scale (example, B is 3.0, B+ is 3.33 points) and follows the overall UF Grading Policy:

Projects and assignments are not accepted after the due date without prior approval by the instructor. This means you must be very focused on the checklist of required items and meet the deadline – be careful not to forget or to click submit 20 seconds too late.

Other Strategies for Success

Here is general advice that, I think, will help you get the most from your university education. Active engagement in the intermediate small group sessions is more valuable than at the end of the project. This means listening to the suggestions of other students, instructor, and offering constructive comments of your own. Often informal performance will influence your creative outcomes...

Timeliness: Meet all final and intermediate deadlines. Arrive Early.

Quantity/Quality: Exceed the minimum, Seek critique.

Innovation: Seek difference, not similarity.

Community: Collaborate, listen, and share.

Contact and Office Hours

Outside of class, you can contact me by email — slawson@ufl.edu — or through the UF School of Art and Art History at 352-392-0201. My office is 313c FAC and office hours will be posted on my door (likely Tuesday at Noon). You can also use the messaging system within Canvas (preferred).

Health and Safety

The UF School of Art and Art History is concerned about the safe use of art materials. Notes related to the design area: Batteries, old monitors, lamps from digital projectors if broken may release mercury.

There are no known health hazards from exposure to lamps that are intact. A complete handbook is provided at — <http://arts.ufl.edu/site/assets/files/37319/saahhealthandsafetyhandbook.pdf>
